All that kids can be | Supporting children and youth to grow up healthy and achieve success

Trend

Growing up can be tough. Not every parent has access to the essential building blocks to raise a healthy child. Too often preschoolers are not ready to learn and children do not have a safe place to go after school. Alarming numbers of young people are not completing high school and are experiencing unemployment.

Goal

United Way strives to help infants grow into healthy children; offers the support children need to start and succeed in school; and empowers young people to make successful transitions into the workforce or post-secondary education. With your support in 2016, United Way invested $990,600 to provide children and youth with the resources and opportunities they need to grow up healthy and achieve success.

As a result, you helped fund 36 programs and services to:

- Support individuals to be strong parents
- Assist children to be ready for school
- Build positive role models and mentoring for children and youth
- Support youth to stay in school and transition to a meaningful work life or post-secondary education
